For Questions 1,2,3,4

Conversation is a fine art. It is the art of exchanging thought. It is an art which anybody can cultivate or master. Not everybody can paint or play music, but almost everyone can talk. Thus it affords the greatest pleasure to the greatest number. To talk", says R.L. Stiversan, "is our chief business in the world. And talk is by far the most accessible of pleasures. It costs nothing in money, it is all profit. It completes our education, makes friends and can be enjoyed at any age. Conversation is indeed the most teachable of all the arts. All you need to do is to find a subject that interests you and your listeners. Hobbies are for example, numberless hobbies to talk about. But the important thing is that you must talk about the other fellow's hobby rather than your own. Therein lies the secret of your popularity. There is nothing that pleases people so much as your interest in their interest. It is just as important to know what subjects to avoid and what subjects to select for good conversation. If you don't want to be set down as a bore, avoid certain unpleasant topics. Avoid talking about yourself unless you are asked to do so. Sickness or death bores everybody. The only one who willingly listens to such talk is, the doctor, but he gets paid for it. You must also know not only what to say but also how to say it.

1 How does the author define and explain the art of conversation?

- quality work with precise aim but everybody can't learn
- fine art easier to learn and within everybody's reach (Correct Answer)
- secret goal with precise art learned within the family
- All of these

2 How is talking easier to learn than other fine arts?

- It is easier to become a good talker than a master painter or musician. (Correct Answer)
- Because people like to hear rather than to see the performance
- People want to hear and not to speak
- None of these

For Questions 5,6,7

This is the story of a man who thought that he had the right to do whatever he liked. One day, this gentleman was walking along a busy road, spinning his walking-stick round and round in his hand, and was trying to look important. A man walking behind him objected. "You ought not to spin your walking-stick round and round like that!" he said. "I am free to do what I like with my walking-stick," argued the gentleman. Of course, you are," said the other man, "but you ought to know that your freedom ends where my nose begins." The story tells us that we can enjoy our rights and our freedom only if they do not interfere with other people's rights and freedom.

5 Why was the gentleman on the road moving his walking stick round and round?

- The gentleman on the road was moving his walking stick round and round because he wanted to dig the earth.
- The gentleman on the road was moving his walking stick round and round because he wanted to find insects.
- The gentleman on the road was moving his walking stick round and round because he wanted to look important. (Correct Answer)
- None of these

6 Who objected to his behaviour?

- A man walking behind him objected to his behaviour. (Correct Answer)
- A man standing behind him objected to his behaviour.
- A man standing ahead to him objected to his behaviour.
- A man standing opposite to him objected to his behaviour.

7 What argument did the gentleman give?

- The gentleman argued that he was finding an insect which bite him. (Correct Answer)
- The gentleman argued that he was finding an insect which bite him.
- The gentleman argued that he was finding an insect which bite him.
- The gentleman argued that he was finding an insect which bite him.

The gentleman argued that he was free to do whatever he liked with his walking-stick. (Correct Answer)

The gentleman argued that he was free to run but was not able to so he did it with his walking-stick.

The gentleman argued that he was not doing so with his walking-stick.

For Questions 8,9,10

A homeopathy is a form of alternative medicine, first proposed by German physician Samuel Hahnemann in 1796 that attempts to treat patients with heavily diluted medicines. Homeopathic remedies are prepared by serial dilution with shaking by forceful striking, which homeopaths term succession after each dilution under the assumption that this increases the effect of the treatment. Homeopaths call this process potentization. Dilution often continues until none of the original substance remains. Homeopathic reference books known as repertories are then consulted, and a remedy is selected based on the totality of symptoms. Homeopathic remedies are considered safe, but are criticized for putting patients at risk due to advice against conventional medicine such as vaccinations, anti-malarial drugs, and antibiotics. Depending on the dilution, homeopathic remedies may not contain any pharmacologically active molecules, and for such remedies to have pharmacological effect would violate fundamental principles of science. Modern homeopaths have proposed that 'water has a memory that allows homeopathic preparations to work without any of the original substance; however, there are no verified observations nor scientifically plausible physical mechanisms for such a phenomenon. The lack of convincing scientific evidence supporting homeopathy's efficacy and its use of remedies lacking active ingredients have caused homeopathy to be described as pseudoscience.
